WEALTH, WISDOM, and VIRTUE.

An EASTERN TALE.

COME near, ye children of pleasure, said the son of Massaud, listen to my instructions, and be wise, and let your hearts learn wisdom from the mouth of Morat.

I am now journeying to the gates of Death; my houses, my gardens, my treasures I must leave behind me. Praised be Mahomet, that Mirza shall enjoy them; but the Prophet of the Highest vouchsafe that they may not be a snare to the son of Morat.

When Abdallah, the friend of Massaud, was received into the gardens of Paradise, his son possessed all his riches, and he shewed to me, his friend, the largeness of his possessions, and the multitude of his wealth. I fed my eyes with the gold of Ophir: I feasted them with the glittering gems of Trak.

Then said I to myself 'Surely Heli is blessed; of a certainty the son of Abdallah is happy!'

I thought on these things, from the going down of the sun till soft sleep seized on men; then, in the visions of the night, the heaps of treasure were still before mine eyes; and I sighed, and said, 'O, that I were as Heli; that as his were the riches of my house!'

While thus my heart burned, a messenger of the Highest, and of his Prophet, stood before me: 'Son of the dust, said he, fear not. What is it thy heart seeketh, wisdom, power, riches, pleasure? Behold, all these are before thee.' And I said, 'Servant of the Highest,

Highest, I have prayed in secret, let riches and power be given me—O ! let my house be as the house of Heli.

When the rising sun had now gilded the East, I arose, and lo ! Heli waited for me. I hastened to the call of my friend ; ‘ Morat,’ said he, Mahomet has revealed to me, in a vision, that the Angel of Death approaches me. My father had no friend like Mahomed ; I have surely none like Morat. Behold, then, all my treasures are thine ; but keep thy friend’s memory still engraven on the tablet of thine heart.

I was struck as with the thunder of heaven, that falls upon the high mountains of Indostan. I replied not ; but, on that day, Heli was cut off, as the flower that fades beneath the sun in the hot valleys of Arabia. I possessed all his wealth ; ‘ Receive now my thanks,’ said I, ‘ O Prophet ! Morat is happy.’ Then counted I my treasures, and rejoiced in the multitude of my riches.

But soon my heart grew anxious ; sleep was banished from my eyes ; I feared the loss of riches ; I trembled for my life. If the Basha of Bagdad knows of thy treasures, he will destroy thee, Morat ! Fear came upon me when I purchased rich stuffs or slaves, or even when I refreshed myself with the food that sustaineth life.

One said to me, as I walked forth to taste the breeze of the evening, ‘ Morat, thy friend is in distress : thou art rich ; wilt thou not lend thy aid to save him ?

With the speed of the hart of the forest I hastened home ; I said to myself, ‘ He knows then of my riches—now am I betrayed !’ I suffered my friend to perish, because my heart failed for fear of my treasure.

While thus I passed my evil days, it chanced, one morning, I cast my eyes on the daughter of a Mussulman. She was beautiful as the full moon ; charming as one of the Houries. It was Fatima, the daughter of Hassan; I burned for her. 'She shall become my wife,' said I, 'Hassan will think himself happy to give her to Morat.' But then my countenance fell when I considered my treasures: 'Will not her father discover them,' said I to myself, 'to the Basna of Bagdad?' O miserable Morat! And, even whilst I spoke, came a messenger from the Basna; he soon followed in person; to him I was obliged to give half my treasures, to preserve the rest. For the darkness that sat on my brow, and the fears of my own heart, had betrayed me, while those, which I helped not, agreed together against me.

Seven days and nights I took no rest, nor did the food of life enter my lips; yet, at last, I suffered myself to be comforted. 'Now the Basna,' said I, 'is satisfied, I have no more to fear from Hassan; I will go and demand of him his daughter.' He received me with smiles, and commanded the damsel to be brought forth; she came, arrayed in shining robes, and dressed like the maidens of the East: 'Morat demandeth thee in marriage,' said her father. 'Art thou willing to be his; is the desire of thine heart towards him?'

The horrors of despair seized my heart, when she answered, 'O! my father, give me not to Morat.'

'Why wilt not thou, O beautiful maiden, become the wife of the son of Massoud?' said I, with a flattering and broken voice—'I love thee, O most charming of women! I have houses, gardens, slaves, and all manner of treasure; I have wealth and power.' True, son of Massoud, said she, 'but thou hast not wisdom, nor the heart to use them.'

Then she vanished from my sight, as the morning dew vanishes before the rising sun. Hassan would not recall her. Her words sunk deep into my mind, and, at evening prayer, I besought Mahomet to give me wisdom and virtue, and take, if it so pleased him, those treasures which I knew not how to employ, and that power which I might be tempted to abuse.

Then it pleased heaven to hearken to my prayer, to grant me more than I had required; for I found myself enlightened with wisdom, yet riches still were mine. But now I no longer feared for them in my heart; I comforted my friends: I became a father to the distressed. When Hassan heard these things, he suddenly stood before me, and, lifting up his voice, said, 'Praised be the Highest, and Mahomet his Prophet, that Morat is, at last, restored to himself! Heaven, cried he, has given thee wisdom and virtue: Behold, I give thee Fatima! live long and happy, and teach these lessons to thy children which thou hast suffered for being ignorant of.'

Thus was I blest with Fatima! and peace and plenty have attended on my steps; while Morat the good, Morat the happy, was echoed from the rising to the setting of the sun. The Angel of death comes now, not unlooked for, to wait me to the gardens of Paradise. Do thou, son of Morat and Fatima, imitate the virtues of thy mother; follow the precepts of thy dying father; use thy riches well, and heaven shall add to them the gifts of wisdom and virtue.

THE FORCE OF LOVE.

HOW wonderful is Love; that alone which every age has consecrated as dear and honourable to human nature! Happy sympathy between two kindred souls! delightful union, which gives every charm to life, and is far remote from the wild transports of guilty passion! Anconius, a young man of the most amiable disposition, was, unknown to himself the son of a Prince, of one of the first families in Palermo, who, having had a secret connection with a lady, his equal in rank, had afterwards married her. In two months after their marriage, she was delivered of a son. The powerful influence of shame, the dread of becoming the conversation of the Court, had such an effect upon them, that he and his lady resolved to conceal the child for ever, and to commit his education to the care of a peasant in a distant village. Here Anconius imbibed the rural virtues from the good peasant his guardian. As he grew up, he excelled all the youth in manly exercises, and enjoyed the pure pleasures of uncorrupted ages. Nor was his soul insensible of the sweet sensations of Love. He saw a village maiden, of manners unsullied as his own :

‘ Her form was fresher than the morning rose,

‘ When the dew wets its leaves; unstain’d and pure;

‘ As is the lilly, or the mountain snow.’

For her he seem’d to live; nor was the lovely Marina inattentive to his vows; and soon all the village said they were to be united in the bands of wedlock. About this time his frail mother, who had afterwards several children by her Lord, was attacked by a disorder that had every symptom of being mortal. The reproaches of her conscience were severe, and in the awful moment of her dissolution she divulged a secret that had hitherto been profoundly kept. The youth was immediately sent for from the country. ‘ Happy Anconius!’ said the whole village, ‘ he will now be great, as well as good.’ But our lover evinc’d more surprize than joy at this sudden elevation. ‘ No,’ said he, ‘ never will I quit that sacred abode of innocence and and peace without my Marina. Admit her to the honours of my house, and the splendour of a Court may then have charms.' This condition could not be granted. The generous youth, therefore, resigned all his claims in favour of a younger brother, and, returning to his rustic cot, long lived moderately, but happily, with his dear country girl, in the tranquil scenes and humble station in which he had been brought up. What an excellent subject for a dramatic piece, and how worthy the pen of a Metastasio or a Sheridan!

SELECT PIECES OF POETRY.

By several eminent CHARACTERS.

THE ROSE, to DR. PRIESTLEY.*

By Mrs. MOODY.

AH! once to purest unpolluted fame
 I, fairest flower, with ardent hope aspir'd;
 Once every Muse rever'd my honour'd name,
 And every eye my blushing charms desir'd.

My blooming race th' immortal Bard has sung,
 That first in groves of Paradise we grew;
 'That there we, lovelier blossom'd, fairer sprung,
 Our verdant stems no thorny briars knew.†

My fame the animated canvas speaks;
 Descriptive Beauty borrows charms from me;
 Behold my hues display'd in Hebe's cheeks!
 The radiant morn with rosy fingers see†

* This Poem was occasioned by an observation of Dr. Priestley, in his Experiments on Air, that 'a rose kept under a glass jar had, in a short time, so infected the air, as to render it unfit for respiration.'

† 'And without thorn the rose.' Paradise Lost, B. IV.

L
Un-

Unblemish'd long my modest beauties glow'd,
 Unblemish'd sweets those beauties shed around,
 And wasted odours by the breeze beslow'd,
 Were balmy treasures in my bosom found.

The nymphs and swains, delighting to inhale
 So pure a breath, oft woo'd the vernal air;
 Presumptuous science now defames that gale,
 Whose rich effluvia Gods might deign to share.

Detested sage! whose penetrating eye
 Surveys mysterious Nature's secret powers,
 Dare thy experiments my fame decry,
 And rank my scent with that of vilest flowers?

With Night-shade, Hellebore, and Aconite?
 Whose noxious juice contains the livid death,
 Who lurk in deserts far from mortal sight,
 Nor blend with Flora's sweets their tainted breath.

Ah! should persuasion crown thy learned lore,
 And fame applaud thy scientific taste;
 An exile I from this luxuriant shore,
 On barren mountains may my odours waste.

No more of Summer's chosen bowers the pride;
 My leaves expanding to the orient sun;
 No more on beauty's snowy breast reside;
 Beauty shall learn my baleful charms to shun.

Nor e'er transplant me to th' embellish'd room,
 In China's splendid vases to appear;
 Nor round her couch admit my dread perfume,
 Nor dare to slumber if the Rose be near.

No more shall luxury, to give me birth,
 Raise the warm pile, excluding Winter's cold;
 Nor, 'mid the dreary scenes of frozen earth,
 Court my reluctant graces to unfold.

Yet know—whate'er thy celebrated art,
Whate'er thy volumes may presume to shew,
The Rose shall grateful pleasure still impart,
And still a welcome fragrance shall bestow.

Remote from science, in th' unletter'd plain,
Where no philosopher our fame assails,
'There, unapproach'd, shall bloom the vernal train,
There, unimpeach'd, shall flow our spicy gales.

ON INFANCY.

By Miss FALCONAR.

HAIL, scenes of life, more lovely than the spring,
More beauteous than the dawn of summer's day,
More gay and artless than the birds that sing
Their tuneful sonnets on the leafy spray!

Adieu, ye paths, adorn'd with springing flowers,
Oh! could those vernal sweets again be given,

When Guardian Angels watch'd my guiltless hours,
And strove to guide my erring steps to heaven.

So the first pair in Paradise were blest,
Perpetual pleasures open'd to the view;

Nor guilt, nor fear, disturb'd the peaceful breast,
Nor anxious care their happy moments knew.

Eut, ah! those joys shall fly with winged speed,
And leave to busy care the jocund scene;

To innocence shall guilt and pain succeed,
To lively youth long hours of gloom and spleen.

So shines the sun in orient splendour bright,
So bloom the roses on a summer's day;

'The sun shall sink in dark and cheerless night,
'The blooming roses feel a sure decay.

To an UNFORTUNATE BEAUTY.

By PETER PINDAR, Esq;

SAY, lovely Maid, with down-cast eye,
 And cheek with silent sorrow pale;
 What gives thy heart the lengthen'd sigh,
 That heaving tells a mournful tale?

Thy tears which thus each other chase,
 Bespeak a breast o'erwhelm'd with woe:
 Thy sighs a storm that wrecks thy peace,
 Which souls like thine should never know.

Oh! tell me, doth some favour'd Youth
 Too often blest, thy beauties slight?
 And leave those thrones of love and truth,
 That lip, and bosom of delight?

What thought to other nymphs he flies,
 And feigns the fond impassion'd tear;
 Breathes all the eloquence of sighs,
 That treach'rous won thy artless ear;

Let not those nymphs thy anguish move,
 For whom his heart may seem to pine—
 That heart shall ne'er be blest by LOVE,
 Whose guilt can force a pang from thine.

FOR CYNTHIA.

By the S A M E.

AH! tell me no more, my dear girl, with a sigh,
 That a coldness will creep o'er my heart;
 That a sudden indifference will dwell on my eye
 When thy beauty begins to depart.

Shall

THE MOST ESTEEMED

NEW SONGS,

Sung at the THEATRES ROYAL, VAUXHALL, RANELAGH, and POLITE CONCERTS, in the Year 1788.

C O N T E N T.

Sung by Mr. INCLEDON.

ATTEND all ye nymphs and ye swains of the green,

For you I have rov'd the plain round;
Whole months I've been prying, and now I have seen
Where smiling Content's to be found.

I fought her 'mongst crowds, and in each gaudy place,
But these were the mansions of care;
In the palace of greatness, unknown was her face,
Contentment had never been there.

At last near a brook to a cottage I stray'd,
With a few scatter'd sheep on the green;
'The rose and the woodbine their sweetness display'd,
Not plenty, but health blest'd the scene.

Good-nature appear'd, and unlock'd me the door,
Nor knew what my coming there meant;
How great my surprize, here my search was all o'er,
She told me her name was Content.

BLINK

BLINK O'ER the BURN, my LADDIE DEAR.A favourite Scotch Song.Sung by Miss LEARY.

YOUNG Sandy is a dowdy lad,
 And Jimmy's swarth and tawny,
 No heart of mine they captive made,
 For that is lost to Johnny.

Blink o'er the burn, my Johnny dear,
 Blink o'er the burn to me,
 Blink o'er the burn, my Johnny dear,
 And I will gang wi' thee.

Young Sandy woots, and sighs, and sues,
 And Jimmy offers money;
 Now well I know they both love me,
 But I love none but Johnny.
 Blink o'er the burn, &c.

And if he asks me for his bride,
 I'll not deny my Johnny;
 He's not a lad to be deny'd,
 So fair, so blith, so bonny.
 Blink o'er the burn, &c.

LOVELY STREPHON.Sung by Miss BERTLES.

LOVELY Strephon, dearest creature,
 Kind invader of my heart,
 Grac'd with ev'ry gift of nature,
 Rais'd with ev'ry grace of art.

Were

I'D THINK ON THEE, MY LOVE.Sung by Mr. INCLEDON.

IN storms, when clouds obscure the sky,
 And thunders roll, and lightnings fly,
 In midst of all these dire alarms,
 I think, my Sally, on thy charms;
 The troubled main,
 The wind and rain,
 My ardent passion prove;
 Lash'd to the helm,
 Should seas o'erwhelm,
 I'd think on thee, my love.

When rocks appear on ev'ry side,
 And art is vain the ship to guide,
 In varied shapes when death appears,
 The thought of thee my bosom cheers.
 The troubled main,
 The wind and rain,
 My ardent passion prove;
 Lash'd to the helm,
 Should seas o'erwhelm,
 I'd think on thee, my love..

But should the gracious pow'rs be kind,
 Dispel the gloom, and still the wind,
 And waft me to thy arms once more,
 Safe to my long-lost native shore,
 No more the main
 I'd tempt again,
 But tender joys improve;
 I then with thee
 Should happy be,
 And think on naught but love.

M

RESTRAIN'D from the SIGHT of my DEAR.Sung by M^{rs} LEARY.

RESTR^AIN'D from the sight of my dear,

 No object with pleasure I see,

Tho' thousands around me appear,

 The world's but a desert to me.

 In vain is the verdure of May,

 The trees dress'd so blooming and gay,

 The birds, tho' they whistle and sing,

 Delight not while Damon's away.

Reclin'd by a soft murmur'ing stream,

 I, weeping, disburthen my care;

 I tell to the rocks my fond theme,

 Whose echo but soothes my despair.

 In vain is the verdure, &c.

Ye streams, that soft murmur'ing flow,

 Convey to my love ev'ry tear;

Ye rocks, that resound with my woe,

 Repeat my complaints in his ear.

 In vain is the verdure, &c.

By the EARL of CARLISLE.

MY heart's mighty empire bright Celia possesst,

And reign'd a most absolute Queen in my breast;

Till too far the presum'd on the pow'r that I gave,

And from a free subject soon made me a slave.

Love's laws she subverted with insolent pride,

And redress of my grievances ever deny'd;

In distress to Amelia my griefs I impart,

Amelia was destin'd to conquer my heart;

She summon'd each beauty to rise up in arms,

And the tyrant drove out by the force of her charms.
